Angels' Rescue from Alzheimers' Demons

Can Alzheimer's Demons be silenced with one simple Gaze?

Anina Toskani tells in "Braco-little Brother, Great Angel" one story that has it all. Everything begins when she takes her depressed mother to Munich, not realizing that she has Alzheimer's Disease. Before his death she promised her father that she would take care of her mother Deli. And she would really like to spoil her while she is going through her old age. First she does not know that Queen Mum Deli was already sitting on her old green couch for years, listening inside, far away from the rest of the world. Demonic voices were whispering into her ear, that she had to die and she should kill herself. Alzheimer demons, hungry for more negative emotion, torture not only Deli herself, but wait for every occasion to attack her daughter. Exhausted from her nursing tasks with Deli, she is at the verge of despair. Mischiefs and bad accidents start to happen. Toskani's war against the demons turns out to be a survival fight for her own life: Burnout, daily loss of weight, lung disease, loss of her voice, her job and her partner, who marries in Thailand, just happen one after the other. In the end her sports car is damaged totally by an accident on the highway travelling to the hospital where Queen Mum Deli is lying on her deathbed.

Nevertheless there are bright spots and moments of bliss coming with divine encounters. Intuitive painting helps Toskani find the way back to inner silence and meditation. Braco's magic gaze supports her and Deli with inner light and inspires her to take Queen Mum Deli with her to Zagreb for a visit to Srebrnjak 1. She does not accept Deli's obsession to die although she is living at that time in social desert having no contacts or friends anymore. When Deli has entered a nursery home, they share blissful heart touching moments. Queen Mum Deli seems never to lose her Rhenanian humour no matter what. Heaven seems to support both from that moment on and she meets Jesus Christ in person and finds Father Pio's support with his rosary.

What can Relatives do, even though Experts have given up?

Relentlessly sincere, the author reports the pitfalls of her mothers' Alzheimer's disease and how she tries whatever she can to fight against her mental and physical deterioration. What can they do if even the ambulant nursery service, the doctor, the clinic and the psychiatrist do not have answers for them? Some good advice is needed! Alzheimer's dementia is a threat for all who get in touch with the phenomenon of unpredictable aggression. Only with Braco's magic gaze, they regain energy and relief. So Toskani is able to concentrate on the most needed things from day to day. Her spiritual seeking brings her into contact with extraordinary healers and Holy Saints. That way she experiences how many more dimensions the soul has than are known in our academic medicine schools. Finally, she succeeds in making the demons flee. Whenever she is about to lose her grounding, couchsurfers, city trips and hostel visits bring her back to a youthful life. That's her survival.

What Role does Braco's Gaze play in this Book?

Braco's gaze is the most important support mother and daughter have during those years of fight with the Alzheimer's attacks. His fascinating gaze opens a door for the author to other worlds. Without Braco, she would have lost her fight against Deli's Alzheimer demons and their constant war against her.

What does this Book bring for the Reader?

This extraordinary story reads like a criminal one, but also touches hearts to tears. People feel the shock and are concerned about the story, but in the end consolation is there with Braco's gaze and the intimate details about the experiences of the author. Supernatural presence and Holy laughter play an important part. The author reports her intimate experiences and analyzes them from the view of her knowledge about hypnosis, fascination, Mesmerism and the Indian Shaktipad Tradition. She finds the connection between an emotional disease and what Eckhart Tolle describes about the behaviour of a human "pain body". That is why the roots and causes of the Alzheimer's Disease can be seen in a totally new light. A new understanding becomes possible then for all who care for their beloved family members. The reader who is curious enough to know more about this unusual story, can read soon the autobiographic novel under the Title – "The End of my Song".
